

Dear Sirs:

Before we had the no call list, someone always managed to call up during the evening meal, thus letting your meal grow cold. It happened like clock work. They would call at 5:05 or 5:10 PM. You could almost set your clock by it.

They would try to sell insurance, along with a list of unnecessary items. It was very irritating. I was very happy when the no call list was instituted and I don't know what would happen if these people could start callin at any time of the day again. I believe they are insensitive to people's wants and needs. In my opinion there is very little they can do, to justify their calling to sell you something you don't want. Please keep the no call list intact!
